PUBLIC DECIDED FOR "NO SMOKING."

The newly awakened consciousness of the right of the people to decide things for themselves took a unique turn in Kansas City recently, when a referendum was held to determine as to whether smoking should be allowed on the street-cars of the city. There have always been quite a number of very decent people who could not understand why they should be forced to submit to the stench of 47 varieties of pipes, el cabbages, two-fors, coffins, etc., simply because a minority of smokers assumed the right to pollute the air in this way. And this time they got their revenge.

There was a great squabble over a smoke rule adopted by the street-car company and the company took the public opinion on the subject a vote of its patrons. The method required extensive work and cost the company about $3000. The balloting covered an entire week. With every fare paid a ticket was issued entitling the passenger to one vote. A thorough system of checking and rechecking prevented any cheating or ballot-box stuffing. It took 1200 ballot-boxes a day or 8400 it all. At the end of the week 30 girls were set to counting the votes, of which over a million and a half were cast. The result showed about 609,000 for smoking, 908,000 against it and 18,000 indifferent.

GOVERNOR NOW PLANS TO LET HOMESTEADERS MAKE GOOD

In accordance with the promise he made public during the closing sessions of the Fisher inquiry, Governor Frear has announced his plan for giving the Waiohine and Hakalau homesteaders a chance to "make good" on their claims, and for watching and advising all other homesteaders so that hereafter none will need lose their lands because of ignorance or proving up.

As he stated to the Secretary of the Interior, the Chief Executive repeats his opinion that many misunderstand the homestead law, especially the amended act which has recently set more stringent rules for the homesteaders' compliance.

In the case of the fifty-eight applicants at Waiohine and Hakalau against whom the supreme court ruled this summer, the Governor says that under the statute further time be given for compliance with the homesteading conditions in some instances, and although the law will have to be stretched somewhat to give this interpretation, it will be done if some do not desire, or are not in a position to continue the homesteading, they will be given an opportunity to sell their rights to someone else who will homestead the tracts, thus enabling the original applicant to get a return for the money they have invested in the property.

The Governor says that hitherto many have thought that the homestead laws were merely a means of acquiring title through the performance of fulfillment of technical requirements, without attention to the question of whether the homesteader really intended to make his home on the land and become a permanent farmer thereon. The decision of the supreme court, therefore, came as a shock to them, holding, as it did, that homesteading must be bona fide, that the laws are really homesteading laws and not merely devices enabling persons to acquire government land cheaply so that they may turn round and sell and make a handsome profit with a very small amount of work.

This was the old theory, he says, and the inducement to continue the system has been especially great in the case of the cane lands, despite the enactment of the amended laws "put into effect two years ago. It is in view of this old misunderstanding that the decision to give homesteaders another chance to make good, has been made.

"It is probable however," says the Governor, "that those who have taken or may take homesteads under the new laws, will require considerable more in the way of education to convince them of what homesteading really is."

"As one method of accomplishing this policy there was adopted some time ago a system of reports made to the land commission by the different land agents from time to time upon the condition of the different homesteads taken up under the new laws, and the way in which the homesteaders were carrying out their conditions."

"In other words, the administration proposes to keep track of the homesteaders right along, and warn them from time to time if necessary, instead of waiting, as was previously the case, for a number of years until they appeared for their patents and having trouble all around."

"The getting of reports in regard to homesteaders from time to time will have its counterpart in the getting of reports also from time to time as to how the different plantations are treating the homesteaders in their neighborhoods, and the warning of the plantations if that shall be found necessary in case they are not treating the homesteaders as fairly and favorably as the administration thinks they should."

Briefly, the plan is to assist the homesteaders materially in making good, both by showing them what they must do and by obtaining fair treatment for them from the big plantations with which they may have to deal. This matter already has been taken up with the homesteaders at Waiohine and Hakalau, notices being sent to some homesteaders personally and to attorneys representing certain groups of them.

DINNER IS GIVEN FOR MISSIONARY TO CHINA

At a farewell dinner last night at Central Union Church parish house in honor of Rev. Dean Rockwell Wickes, enroute to China, as missionary for the layman of the church, one hundred men, members of the Men's League, were hosts.

The speakers of the evening were Dr. Wickes, Paul Super, and F. J. Lowrey, and the male quartet of Central Union Church gave two selections, which were very much appreciated. The topic of Dr. Wickes' talk was based on his future work in China, and his familiarity with the duties he will undertake there. He was commendable in his remarks concerning the Men's League and the work they are doing for the missionaries and consequently the Chinese.

In the course of Mr. Super's talk he told of the origin of the hymn, "The missionary movement, and its spread over the United States, and how the men of the leading churches on the mainland are sending their own missionaries into the new field in China.

In an announcement made by F. J. Lowrey, he stated that $2388.15 had been raised during the past year for the foreign mission fund. This was especially gratifying to the members as they have pledged $6000, a year to the fund, and were surprised to learn that such a large amount had been subscribed.

Doctor Scudder spoke upon the qualifications of the representatives for the church in the Chinese field, and when he explained why Dr. and Mrs. Wickes would be best fitted for their work, he spoke from an experience of mental knowledge. Stress was laid upon the relation of the teacher to the Chinese pupil, and as a teacher, Dr. Wickes will be enabled to come into closer contact with the unlightened Orientals.

As the Chinese woman, after long centuries of oppression, is beginning to recognize that her life is bettered in many ways, Mrs. Wickes will be of great help to these women on account of her special training along social lines.

JUDD SAYS CITY SHOULD PREPARE FOR 180,000

Points to Wet Lands as Factor Against Growth Along Right Lines

Declaring that Honolulu will have 180,000 population in 1927, that the citizens in general are asleep so far as planning public improvements to meet this vast growth, and that in particular Honolulu's vast areas of wet agricultural land must be broken up, Senator A. F. Judd addressed a deeply interested gathering of citizens yesterday afternoon in the public service association rooms.

The meeting was that of the civic federation, but the attendance embraced several non-members and the gathering was a representative one. Several road experts and mining engineers were present, and the senator's address and discussion afterward crystallized into action, in the form of a motion to take up the plan of a big trunk sewer along the Waikiki section of the city. Cooperation with the federal authorities to make this trunk sewer serve Fort De Russy, is necessary.

He brought up the tenement house question, urging that land should be made available for the building of cottages to do away with the congested tenement house system. "A comprehensive plan for improvements along these lines is needed," he asserted, "beginning at the wharves and radiating outward. Let us be convinced first that there is absolute necessity for immediate action, and being a unit thereon, take up the question of method." He suggested that the police power of the health authorities coupled to the local improvement idea would provide the method, and took occasion to draw attention to the decision of the supreme court yesterday affirming the validity of the health reclamation act. He also urged that the proposed improvement bill that will go to the next legislature be given wide publicity as soon as possible so that its meaning may be familiar to all.

There was considerable discussion after Mr. Judd finished his address, mainly as to the details of a local improvement act and the plans for paying the expense of improvements under it.
